

Markets retain optimistic mood

Investor sentiment retained a positive tone yesterday. The 'risk-on' mood was against the backdrop of reports of progress in talks to re-open the Strait of Hormuz as well as finding an overall resolution to the Middle East conflict. Optimism that a deal can be achieved was reflected in oil prices, which fell by around 5%. Brent crude eased back below the $80 per barrel mark. Corporate earnings news was also supportive of risk appetite. The upbeat tenor to risk appetite was evident in gains for the main equity indices on both sides of the Atlantic. In Europe, the Euro Stoxx 50 rose by 0.9%. Meanwhile, at the closing bell on Wall Street last night, the S&P 500 was 1.8% higher on the day, registering a new record high.

On the currency front, the majors were confined to relatively narrow ranges throughout yesterday. Of the limited moves to note over the past 24 hours, the dollar is modestly softer versus some of the other majors amid the 'risk-on' mood to market sentiment and fall in oil prices. In level terms, the EUR/USD pair has edged higher within the lower half of $1.15-1.16 territory. GBP/USD has moved up to the midpoint of the $1.34-1.35 corridor. Meanwhile, EUR/GBP has maintained its position in the upper half of the 85-86p band. Elsewhere, after last week's joint Japan/US intervention and its aftermath, the yen has been less volatile. USD/JPY has tended to operate within a narrow range below the ¥158 threshold since yesterday's open.

Looking ahead to today, developments in relation to the Middle East conflict will remain a potential source of direction for markets. Data-wise, the main macro releases of note are from the US diary. We get the non-manufacturing ISM survey for July. The US schedule also features the ADP employment report for July, which although is not a reliable guide, will nonetheless be assessed ahead of Friday's official payroll number.
